

Our exams policy is currently under review – an update will be posted in early 2017

In the meantime, please note the following important information about your Unique Learner Number (ULN)

- Your ULN is a ten digit reference number, unique to yourself for use within education. Please keep this number in a safe place.
- Your ULN will also be used to collect and share information amongst education related organisations, careers advisors, and college registration and course enrolment staff.
- Your PLR will include information about your qualifications, awards, training events and learning achievements that you may collect throughout your education lifetime – at all levels and also whilst you are working and learning.
- Your PLR can be shared with organisations who have a responsibility for providing, funding and serving your education and training.
- Your PLR record will help you to share your achievements, including any participation of learning, the training institute details and over what period. Please note that you will always be in control of who accesses your PLR.
- If you have still not reached the age of 16, please discuss this privacy notice explanation with your parent or legal guardian.